The most striking thing about the White House is how much it feels like a house. A 55,000-sq-ft house, but still a real one where a family lives. If you're lucky enough to get inside on a public tour, you'll see several rooms in the main residence, each rich in presidential lore. The walk-through is self-guided and takes about half an hour. (FREE; tours 7:30-11:30am Tue-Thu, to 1:30pm Fri & Sat;  McPherson Sq)

★ Top tip If you don't get in on a tour, visitors can still see the White House from the south side of the Ellipse. (7:30am-4pm).

...like the... in the Bond movies with Q, you'll like the immensely popular International Spy Museum. All the undercover tools of the trade on display make this place great for (secret) history buffs. Kids love it. (800 F St NW; adult/child $21/15; 9am-7pm May-Aug, 10am-6pm Sep-Apr;  Gallery Pl)

★ Top tip The gift shop stocks reverse-mirrored sunglasses and disguised listening devices among its cool gadgets.

Visiting the Lincoln Memorial at night is great as it's well lit and particularly atmospheric once the sun sets (plus there's less crowd jostling). In a city of icons, the monument for the nation's 16th president stands out in the crowd. Maybe it's the classicism evoked by the Greek-temple design or the stony dignity of Lincoln's gaze. (2 Lincoln Memorial Circle NW; FREE; 24hr;  Foggy Bottom-GWU)
