Why Go?

Older than the Pyramids, as sublime as any temple, Egypt's Western Desert is a vast sweep of elemental beauty. The White Desert's shimmering vista of surreal rock formations and the ripple and swell of the Great Sand Sea's mammoth dunes are simply bewitching.

Within this intense landscape five oases, shaded by palm plantations and blessed by a plethora of natural hot and cold springs, provide a glimpse of rural Egyptian life. Get lost exploring Al-Qasr's squiggling narrow lanes in Dakhla. Watch sunset sear across the countryside atop Gebel al-Ingleez in Bahariya. Take a stroll amid Siwa's sprawling date palms. Then once you've finished adventuring, kick back and just enjoy the laid-back pace of oasis life.

When to Go

Siwa

Apr–May After winter, travellers thin out. See the White Desert without the crowds.

Sep–Oct Wander the oases' palm groves as the date harvest commences.

Nov–Mar Desert-expedition high season. Don your explorer hat and hit the dunes.
