London's Theatreland in the dazzling West End spans from Aldwych in the east, past Shaftesbury Ave to Regent St in the west. Its concentration of English-speaking theatres (more than 40) is rivaled only by Broadway. With the longest history, it is also the world's most diverse, from Shakespeare classics to boundary-pushing productions to raise-the-roof musicals that run and run. The Royal Opera House, right in Covent Garden, is also a sumptuous location for opera and ballet. (Evening shows generally start at 7.30pm; Covent Garden)
