Two Weeks City Highlights

With only two weeks to travel, the challenge is to see as much as possible whilst doing justice to each place you visit. This whirlwind tour concentrates on four of the region's most seductive cities.

Start with three days in the French capital, Paris. Check out the big sights – the Eiffel Tower, Notre Dame, the Louvre – and lap up the lifestyle in buzzing Montmartre and the Marais. Armed with your newly acquired savoir-faire, head southwards to Madrid, Spain's passionate capital. Admire the vast art collection at the Museo del Prado and pop into the king's royal palace, before an evening bar-hopping from one tapas joint to the next. After a couple of days, fly over to Venice, Italy's haunting and impossibly beautiful canal city. Here you'll have fun losing yourself in atmospheric lanes and postcard perfect piazzas, perhaps taking a gondola down the Grand Canal. From Venice, push on down to Italy's magnificent Eternal City. They say a lifetime's not enough for Rome, but three days should give you just enough time for the big sights – the Colosseum, Roman Forum, Vatican and Sistine Chapel.

One Month A Tale of Two Continents

Marvel at amazing architecture, get lost in medinas and kick back on Atlantic beaches as you make your way round Portugal, Morocco and Spain on this intercontinental tour.

Start off in Lisbon, Portugal's laid-back capital and one of Europe's oft-overlooked cities. Explore the tangled lanes of the colourful Alfama district and tune in to the city sound at a fado club before heading down to The Algarve for a taste of Portuguese beach life. There are loads of beaches to choose from, including several around Lagos, a small fishing town with a vibrant summer scene. From Lagos, overnight trains run across the border to Seville in Spain. A sultry, fiery city famous for its full-blooded lifestyle and explosive festivals, Seville provides the perfect introduction to southern Spanish life. From Seville continue on to Tarifa, where you can catch a ferry to the Moroccan port of Tangier. After a quick nose around this lively, energetic city push on down the coast to cosmopolitan Casablanca and, beyond that, the hip resort of Essaouira, a perennial favourite with travellers. Next, venture inland to Marrakesh, one of Morocco's highlights. Watch the sun set on the blood-red walls and enjoy the nightly spectacle at Djemaa el-Fna before pressing on to Fez and its labyrinthine medina, the world's largest medieval Islamic city. Once you've found your way out of the maze and taken in the colourful (and smelly) tanneries, head up to Melilla on the north coast for an overnight ferry to Málaga in Spain. Hang around for a day or two to visit the wonderful Museo Picasso Málaga and enjoy the exuberant nightlife and then head up to Granada to visit the remarkable Alhambra. A masterpiece of medieval Islamic architecture, this is one of Spain's most celebrated Moorish marvels, along with the Mezquita at Córdoba. Yet more architectural wonders await in the beautiful cathedral town of Toledo, where historic streets are crammed with monuments and reminders of a turbulent past. The last stop is Madrid, Spain's thumping capital, where you can ogle world-class art, eat like a prince and party into the small hours.

One Month A Coastal Jaunt

Passing through the French Riviera, several Unesco-listed national parks and a number of full-blooded Mediterranean ports, this three-country route takes in some of the region's finest coastal scenery.

Start in Marseille, France's edgy, multiethnic Mediterranean port. A far cry from the postcard-pretty landscape that characterises much of the surrounding Provence region, it's a gritty, atmospheric city with some great sights and wonderful restaurants where you can sample a bowl of bouillabaisse. From Marseille, follow the coast eastwards along the fabled French Riviera. Top up your tan at St-Tropez and catch a film at Cannes as you wind your way along the coast to Nice, the Côte d'Azur's busy, cosmopolitan capital. From Nice, take a train to Genoa where you can wander the same salty streets that once inspired local boy Christopher Columbus, and eyeball sharks at Europe's second largest aquarium. For more sea thrills take a day or two to explore the Cinque Terre, one of Italy's most spectacular stretches of coastline. The road now leads to Rome, as all eventually do. Take in the big headline sights before continuing south to manic, in-your-face Naples. This sprawling city is not to everyone's taste but amidst the chaos it harbours some truly amazing works of art, many taken from the nearby ruins of Pompeii. Continuing on, you'll come to the Amalfi Coast, a dreamy stretch of shimmering seascapes and plunging cliffs. From the Mediterranean coast, cross over to the Adriatic port of Bari where you can catch a ferry for Croatia. While you wait to set sail, visit the Basilica di San Nicola and see where the bones of St Nicholas, aka Santa Claus, are buried. Over in Croatia, the first stop is Dubrovnik, the undisputed star of the Dalmatian coast. Once you've marvelled at the city's marble streets and baroque buildings, jump on a boat for some island hopping. Nearby, peaceful Mljet Island is a seductive mix of forests, vineyards and small villages, while further north Hvar Island boasts sunshine, beaches and a vibrant nightlife. From Hvar, it's a short ferry ride to Split, Croatia's second largest city and home to the Unesco-listed Diocletian's Palace, one of Eastern Europe's greatest Roman monuments.

One Month A Balkan Odyssey

Mountainous and covered in great swathes of forest, Slovenia and the Balkan countries present the tougher, more rugged side of the Mediterranean. This 1045km eastern European odyssey leads through stunning mountain landscapes and beautiful towns as it snakes southwards from Slovenia to Albania.

To get you in the mood start with a few days in Ljubljana, Slovenia's cultured capital, enjoying the cafe life and exploring the city's landmark castle. Once done, head northwest to the lakeside town of Bled. A gorgeous spot in its own right, Bled makes a great base for hiking in the surrounding Julian Alps. From Bled double back to Ljubljana to pick up a bus to the Croatian capital, Zagreb. Hang around for a coffee or two in the Upper Town before pushing on to Bosnia & Herzegovina and Bihać, a pretty staging post on the road to Sarajevo. Before reaching the Bosnian capital, take time to stop off at Jajce, famous for its catacombs, citadel and waterfall, and Travnik, home to some impressive castle ruins. After a few days enjoying Sarajevo's charming Turkish quarter and hip east-west vibe continue south to Mostar and its scene-stealing bridge. Known as the Stari Most, this is one of BiH's most iconic sights, along with the divers who hurl themselves from it during the July diving competition. From Mostar, it's a straightforward bus journey to Herceg Novi, an attractive walled town on Montenegro's coast at the mouth of the Bay of Kotor. A spectacular road winds its way along the bay to the magnificent medieval town of Kotor, wedged between dark mountains at the head of southern Europe's deepest fjord. The route here turns inland, through the thrilling Lovćen National Park, and on to Montenegro's former capital Cetinje. Continuing eastwards brings you to Podgorica, the nation's low-key modern capital. About 65km from Podgorica on the southeastern tip of Lake Shkoder, ancient Shkoder provides a good introduction to Albania as well as a convenient base for exploring the remote mountains around Theth. The last stretch of the tour leads south to the capital Tirana, once a model of drab Soviet-style urban blandness, now a crazy, colourful, buzzing city.

Three Weeks

Greek Island Hopping

With their beautiful beaches, ancient ruins and endless pleasures, the Greek Islands have been seducing travellers for millennia. Ferry services are reduced in winter, so this a trip best undertaken in summer.

The obvious starting point is Athens, home to some of Europe's most iconic monuments. From nearby Piraeus, jump on a ferry for Mykonos, one of Greece's top island destinations. A hedonistic hot spot, it boasts action-packed beaches and a pretty white-washed town. Before leaving, take time for a day trip to Delos, the mythical birthplace of the god Apollo. From Mykonos, sail south to Naxos, the largest and greenest of the Cyclades islands. It's much more than a beach stop, and its enticing main town and striking interior make it well worth exploring. From Naxos, it's a quick ferry ride to laid-back Paros and the popular beaches of Antiparos. Continuing southwards, Santorini is one of the Aegean's most impressive islands, its volcanic cliffs sheering up from the limpid blue sea. Greece's most southerly island, Crete makes a fitting finale. Just southwest of the main city Iraklio is Knossos, the ancient capital of Minoan Crete where the mythical Minotaur is supposed to have lived.

Two Weeks

Turkish Delights

Bridging the gap between East and West, Turkey is a compelling cauldron of culture and style.

The place to start is Istanbul, one of the world's great cities, whose highlights include Topkapı Palace, Aya Sofya and Blue Mosque. Further round the Aegean coast Çanakkale is a popular base for visiting nearby Gallipoli, scene of vicious fights during WWI, and the legendary town of Troy. Following the coast, you arrive at Bergama, celebrated for the ruins of ancient Pergamum, once a powerful Middle Eastern kingdom. More classical treasures await at Ephesus (Efes), Turkey's version of Pompeii, near Selçuk, home to the scarce remains of the Temple of Artemis, one of the Seven Wonders of the Ancient World. From Selçuk, push on to Patara, where you can share a magnificent 20km-long beach with breeding turtles. Spend a day or two hanging out in a tree house in Olympos before heading on to Antalya, with its historic Ottoman district and ancient Roman harbour. At this point head inland to Konya, which gave birth to the 13th-century whirling dervishes and also boasts some fine Seljuk architecture. Further northeast, the eerie, rocky landscape around Göreme is one of Turkey's most incredible sights.

Three Weeks Food, Port and Provence

Taking in Portugal, Spain and France, this Franco-Iberian tour works either as a stand-alone itinerary or as half of a longer pan-Mediterranean tour.

The starting point is Lisbon, Portugal's fascinating and charming capital. When you've done exploring its Moorish ramparts and twisting tumbledown alleys, head north to the country's second largest city, Porto, the ideal place to taste the national tippie, port. From Porto get an overnight train to Bilbao in the Spanish Basque Country, where you'll find one of southern Europe's most recognisable buildings, the stunning Museo Guggenheim. East of Bilbao, San Sebastián is an elegant seafront city celebrated as one of Spain's great foodie destinations. Once sated, continue on to Barcelona for a blast of metropolitan style and a look at the city's unique Modernisme architecture. Next, jump on a train to Nîmes, a vibrant city that houses some of France's finest Roman ruins. To the east, Avignon provides an elegant introduction to Provence, France's showcase region renowned for its blistering colours and beautiful landscapes. As you head to the gripping Mediterranean port of Marseille, take a day to enjoy the bohemian chic of Aix-En-Provence, birthplace of Paul Cézanne and author Émile Zola.

Three Weeks Artistic Glories

Depending on how much time you have, this whistle-stop tour of Italy and Greece can either be undertaken as a trip in its own right or as a continuation of the previous tour of Portugal, Spain and France.

Kick off in Florence, the birthplace of the Renaissance and one of Italy's great art cities. After a few days ogling priceless treasures, drag yourself away for a quick stopover at Pisa, home to the world-famous Leaning Tower; en route to Rome and more mind-boggling artistic treasures. From Rome, pick up a train to the Adriatic port of Bari and a ferry for Patra. Once docked, head straight for Olympia, venue of the first Olympic Games in 776 BC. After a night there continue south-east to Mystras, famed for the beauty of its Byzantine palaces and monasteries. Next day, head to the charming seafront town of Nafplio for a day or two, before pushing on to mythical Mycenae and the ruins of Ancient Corinth. Across the water, Athens is a chaotic mix of the ancient and the modern. Not to be missed, the Parthenon dominates the cityscape from its position over the Acropolis, while the National Archaeological Museum houses the country's most important collection of ancient artefacts.

Anja Mutić

Croatia It's been more than 18 years since Anja left her native Croatia. The journey took her to several countries before she made New York City her base 11 years ago. But the roots are a'calling. She's been returning to Croatia frequently for work and play, intent on discovering a new place on every visit. On her last trip, she loved exploring Hvar's lavender-dotted interior. Anja blogs about her travels at www.everthenomad.com.

Josephine Quintero

Cyprus Josephine has visited Cyprus many times and finds the island fascinating; she also feels a real affinity with Cypriots from both sides of the Green Line. Highlights during this trip were visiting the incredible frescoed Byzantine churches in the Republic and a moonlit stroll around the north's Kyrenia harbour, a quintessential Mediterranean resort. Josephine also rediscovered the irresistible appeal of the traditional meze, washed down with local Cypriot wine from one of the growing number of wineries in the Troodos.

Regis St Louis

Portugal Regis' long-time admiration for wine, rugged coastlines and melancholic music made him easy prey for Portugal. He has travelled extensively across the country, most recently fêting Lisbon's favourite saint at the Festa de Santo Antonio, exploring gorgeous beaches in the Parque Natural da Arrábida and eating too many pasteis de nata (including six in one day—oops). Regis is the coordinating author of Lonely Planet Portugal, and his travel essays have appeared in newspapers, in-flight magazines and online. He lives in Brooklyn, New York.

Nicola Williams

France Nicola Williams has lived in France and written about it for more than a decade. From her hillside home on the southern shore of Lake Geneva, it's a quick flit to the Alps (call her a ski fiend...), Paris (... art buff), Provence (... food and wine lover). Paris this time meant stylish-apartment living in St-Germain des Prés with husband extraordinaire Matthias and three trilingual kids with ants in their pants. Nicola blogs at tripalong.wordpress.com and tweets at @Tripalong.

Neil Wilson

Malta Researching this chapter provided Neil with the opportunity to enjoy Malta in perfect autumn weather, wandering the streets of Valletta and Vittoriosa, hiking the coast of Gozo, and tucking into fresh local food in places like Mahzen XII in Mdina. Neil is a full-time travel writer based in Edinburgh, Scotland, and has written more than 50 guidebooks, including Lonely Planet's Malta & Gozo.

Jayne D'Arcy

Albania Counting Albania's highlights every two years for the past six has led Jayne to the startling conclusion that Albania resembles a robust child's growth chart. Taking advantage of the growth are cyclists in remote corners, hikers turning the 'Accursed Mountains' into a 'must-hike' and backpacker hostels opening in the hottest spots. When she's not taking photos of vintage folding bikes in Albania, Jayne also writes about the southern hemisphere (South East Asia on a Shoestring and Australia) and rides her own vintage folding bike around Melbourne, Australia.

Peter Dragičević

Montenegro Among the two dozen or so Lonely Planet books that Peter's co-written are the first ever Montenegro country guide, Western Balkans and the two previous editions of this title. While it was family ties that first drew him to the Balkans, it's the history, natural beauty, convoluted politics, cheap rakija and intriguing people that keep bringing him back. This trip's highlight was a particularly dramatic trek through the clouds to the Njegoš monument on the top of Mt Lovćen.

Mark Elliott

Bosnia & Hercegovina British born travel-writer Mark Elliott was only 11 when his family dragged him to Sarajevo and stood him in the now defunct concrete footsteps of Gavrilo Princip. Fortunately no Austro-Hungarian emperors were passing at the time. He has since visited virtually every corner of BiH sipping fine Hercegovinian wines, talking philosophy with Serb monks and Sufi mystics and drinking more Bosnian coffee than any healthy stomach should. When not writing he lives in Belgium with the lovely Danielle who he met while jamming blues harmonica in a Turkmenistan club.

Steve Fallon

Slovenia Steve has been travelling to Slovenia since the early 1990s, when almost everyone but the Slovenes had never heard of the place. Never mind, it was his own private Idaho for over a decade. Though on še govori slovensko kot jamski človek (he still speaks Slovene like a caveman), Steve considers part of his soul to be Slovenian and returns as often as he can for a glimpse of the Julian Alps in the sun, a dribble of bučno olje and a dose of the dual.

Anthony Ham

Spain In 2002, Anthony arrived in Madrid on a one-way ticket. He has called the city home ever since and now lives with his madrileña wife and two daughters overlooking their favourite plaza in the city. He has written more than fifty guide-books for Lonely Planet, including Spain and Madrid. Researching this guide allowed him to rediscover his home city afresh (Malasaña is his new favourite barrio) and he particularly enjoyed losing himself in the villages of Aragón.

Virginia Maxwell

Italy Virginia has been travelling regularly in Italy for over 20 years, inspired by a love of Renaissance arts and architecture and an all-abiding passion for the country's food and wine. She is the coordinating author of Lonely Planet's Tuscany & Umbria book and has covered Rome, Lazio and Tuscany for the Italy guidebook.

Craig McLachlan

Greece Craig has researched the Greek Islands for four of the most recent Lonely Planet guidebooks to Europe. He is also a regular visitor to Greece as a tour leader, mainly guiding hiking groups in the mountains and gorges of Crete and around the Cyclades. A Kiwi, Craig spends the southern-hemisphere summer running an outdoor adventure company in Queenstown before heading north for the winter as a 'freelance anything'. He is also a karate instructor and Japanese interpreter. Check out www.craigmclachlan.com.

OUR STORY

A beat-up old car, a few dollars in the pocket and a sense of adventure. In 1972 that's all Tony and Maureen Wheeler needed for the trip of a lifetime – across Europe and Asia overland to Australia. It took several months, and at the end – broke but inspired – they sat at their kitchen table writing and stapling together their first travel guide, Across Asia on the Cheap. Within a week they'd sold 1500 copies. Lonely Planet was born.

Today, Lonely Planet has offices in Melbourne, London and Oakland, with more than 600 staff and writers. We share Tony's belief that 'a great guidebook should do three things: inform, educate and amuse'.

OUR WRITERS

Duncan Garwood

Coordinating author & Italy Ever since island-hopping around the Greek Islands as a student, Duncan has been fascinated by the Mediterranean and its wonderful mix of history, culture and endless sunshine. Many years later he can actually see the Med from the balcony of his hilltop apartment just outside Rome. Duncan moved to Italy in 1997 and after a few years teaching English – once, memorably, to Italy's Miss World candidate – took to the road as a Lonely Planet writer. He has since travelled extensively in Italy and contributed to a raft of titles as well as newspapers and magazines.

This is the fifth edition of Mediterranean Europe he has worked on and with each one he discovers yet more reasons to love the region he now calls home.

Alexis Averbeck

Greece Alexis Averbeck lives in Hydra, Greece and makes any excuse she can to travel the isolated back roads of her adopted land. She is committed to dispelling the stereotype that Greece is simply a string of sandy beaches. A travel writer for two decades, Alexis has lived in Antarctica for a year, crossed the Pacific by sailboat and written books on her journeys through Asia and the Americas. She's also a painter – see her work at www.alexisaverbeck.com.

James Bainbridge

Turkey Coordinating two editions of Lonely Planet's Turkey took James from Aegean islands to the Anatolian plateau. He also spent most of 2010 living in Istanbul – trendy Cihangir to be exact – and learning to love suffixes on a Turkish course. Originally from England, he now lives in Cape Town (Turkey, give my South African girlfriend a visa next time!) and writes about Africa, the Middle East and Europe for worldwide publications. His other Lonely Planet credits include the previous edition of this guide and, most recently, coordinating Morocco.

Paul Clammer

Morocco As a student, Paul had his first solo backpacking experience when he took a bus from his Cambridgeshire home all the way to Casablanca. After an interlude where he trained and worked as a molecular biologist, he returned to work as a tour guide, trekking in the Atlas and trying not to lose passengers in the Fez medina. The increasing number of budget airline routes from the UK to Morocco is one of his favourite recent travel innovations, allowing him to continue to hop over to Morocco on a regular basis.
