

Fall foliage A Vermont road, ablaze with autumn color

WELCOME TO NEW ENGLAND FALL FOLIAGE

New England is radiant in autumn, when farm stands overflow with freshly harvested produce and leaves sparkle with brilliant bursts of yellow and red.

These four road trips wend their way through vivid streamers of seasonal foliage. They roam over country roads and circle sparkling lakes, traversing the rolling Berkshire Hills, the forested Green Mountains and the alpine Whites. To see and do the best of New England – to really experience the history, artistry and diversity of this formative region – you have to get in your car and drive.

So rev up your engine. Mount spectacular summits and ogle eye-popping fall foliage. Chow down on crispy clams and fresh farm produce. Turn the page for more.
