

Louvre & Les Halles

LOUVRE | LES HALLES

Neighbourhood Top Five

- 1 Getting lost in the mother of all museums, the palatial Musée du Louvre (p109).
- 2 Contemplating contemporary art and architecture at the Centre Pompidou (p117).
- 3 Meeting Monet and revelling in Paris at its symmetrical best in the Jardin des Tuileries (p119).
- 4 Feasting on exquisite sacred art and soulful music in Église St-Eustach (p120).
- 5 Browsing designer boutiques beneath the arcaded galleries of the Jardin du Palais Royal (p122).

For more detail of this area see Map p388 and p392 ➔

Lonely Planet's Top Tip

Some of Paris' top tables are here, but you need to book in advance: plan two months ahead for a table at Frenchie (p127) or Yam'Tcha (p129) and up to a month ahead for Spring (p129) or Verjus (p127). Both Frenchie and Verjus have neighbouring wine bars where you simply rock up and wait for a stool to feast on lighter creations from the same talented chefs.

Best Places to Eat

- ➔ Frenchie (p127)
- ➔ Yam'Tcha (p129)
- ➔ Verjus (p127)
- ➔ Spring (p129)
- ➔ Pirouette (p128)

For reviews, see p123 ➔

Best Places to Drink

- ➔ Experimental Cocktail Club (p131)
- ➔ Jeffrey's (p131)
- ➔ Telescope (p129)
- ➔ Le Garde Robe (p131)
- ➔ Zen Zoo (p130)

For reviews, see p129 ➔

Best Entertainment

- ➔ Le Grand Rex (p133)
- ➔ Comédie Française (p132)
- ➔ Louvre Auditorium (p132)
- ➔ Le Baiser Salé (p131)

For reviews, see p132 ➔

Explore: Louvre & Les Halles

The banks of the Seine make an enchanting starting point. A wonderful exploratory loop snakes westwards along quai des Tuileries, past the sculptures and green lawns, pools and fountains of Jardin des Tuileries, to the Musée de l'Orangerie and Jeu du Paume. Continue on foot north to ritzy place Vendôme, then loop back east along shop-chic rue St-Honoré to Palais Royal.

Set aside at least half a day for the Musée du Louvre. Avoid museum fatigue by combining the often-intimidating art gallery with a long lunch or a picnic and invigorating mooch around the designer galleries and manicured gardens of Jardin du Palais Royal. Serious art lovers will want to set aside another half-day minimum for the Centre Pompidou, for Europe's largest collection of modern art.

Once you cross rue du Louvre into Les Halles, the timeless sophistication of the Louvre area disappears. Instead, unwary passers-by are solicited with bright lights, jostling crowds, painted ladies and the swinging jazz clubs of rue des Lombards. Day and night the mainly pedestrian zone between the Centre Pompidou and Forum des Halles is packed with people, just as it was for the 850-odd years when Paris' main halles (marketplace) for foodstuffs was here.

Local Life

➔ After-Work Drinks Rue Montorgueil has a good selection of cafe-bars, but it is rue St-Saveur's cocktail clubs (p131) and the hip bars on rue Montmartre that steal the apéro (predinner drink) show.

➔ Museums Forget Tuesday when the Louvre (p109) and Centre Pompidou (p117) are closed; go local and visit during late-night openings (less crowded) or one-off cultural events and happenings.

➔ Japantown Busy rue St-Anne, just west of Jardin du Palais Royal, is loaded with Asian eateries, though the best choices are found in the side streets.

Getting There & Away

➔ Metro & RER The Louvre has two metro stations: Palais Royal-Musée du Louvre (lines 1 and 7) and Louvre Rivoli (line 1). Numerous metro and RER lines converge at Paris' main hub, Châtelet-Les Halles.

➔ Bus Major bus lines include the 27 from rue de Rivoli (for bd St-Michel and place d'Italie) and the 69 near the Louvre Rivoli metro (for Invalides and Eiffel Tower).

➔ Bicycle Stations at 1 place Ste-Marguerite de Navarre and 2 rue de Turbigo are best placed for the Châtelet-Les Halles metro/RER hub; for the Louvre pedal to/from 165 rue St-Honoré.

➔ Boat The hop-on, hop-off Batobus (p351) stops outside the Louvre.