Why Go?

Turkey's Turquoise Coast is a huge region of endless azure sea, lined with kilometres of sandy beaches and backed by mountains rising up to almost 3000m. It's a winning combination no matter how you look at it, but add to that a surfeit of ancient ruins strewn through the aromatic scrub, pine forests, and a large selection of sports and activities, and you've hit pay dirt.

By far the most dramatic way to see this stretch of coastline is by skimming through the crystal waters aboard a gulet (traditional wooden yacht) or by following sections of the 500km-long Lycian Way on foot, high above what the Turks call the Akdeniz (literally, 'White Sea').
