It’s time to board the plane!

Some people live in apartment blocks

Or in terraced houses

Or even on houseboats!

In cities, trains run above the ground...

Mind the gap!

and under the ground

Prepare to be amazed as more than 50 animals go head-to-head in a bid to be crowned the best athletes on the planet. From classic track-and-field events like sprinting and long jumping to weightlifting, swimming and diving, the world’s most extraordinary creatures will compete to see who’s the fastest runner, loudest caller, quickest eater, and furthest flyer. Packed with fun facts and with loads of flaps to lift, this is a sporting contest like no other!

- Races include human competitors for a sense of scale and comparison
- Quirky illustrations and more than 80 flaps to lift making this book interactive and fun
FEATS OF STRENGTH

CATEGORY 1: STRONGEST ANIMALS

The African elephant is the strongest animal on Earth and its trunk is the strongest! It can lift weights and break branches with ease.

Feeding a triple punch – strong arms, huge teeth, and powerful paws. This haze doesn’t even know what’s about to happen next!

CATEGORY 2: STRONGEST ANIMALS FOR THEIR SIZE

The butterfly is the strongest animal for its size. It can lift hundreds of times more than its weight.

JUMPING

We’re back in the athletes’ stadium now for the ultimate jumping event. Competing today are some of the strangest athletes on the planet – from long-legged kangaroos and high-jumping frogs to graceful anemones that spring right up in the air with every stroke. Who will win the distance and height challenge? And who can make the biggest jump of all?

Emma can’t fly but she can jump! She uses her flippers and single-winged flaps to leap into the air and grab leaves from the overhanging trees.

The record for the longest leap by a kangaroo was set by Jack Powell in 1995. A jumping kangaroo can leap almost 10 times its body length from danger in an instant.
